Tradition. Innovation. Trust.

95 Years of Quality Service

In the early 1900s, T.C. Taylor, a plumber in England, immigrated to Chicago and founded Taylor Plumbing. Since then, Taylor Plumbing has grown to become one of the largest service-oriented companies in the Northwest suburbs, while remaining a close, family-owned business.

You don't grow and excel for 95 years without a commitment to prompt and courteous service, continual equipment upgrades, and ongoing employee education. Taylor Plumbing's technicians are true professionals who average 25 years of experience. They take pride in their trade and offer suggestions and solutions that go beyond the call of duty.

If you've been disappointed in the past by tardiness, sloppiness or poor workmanship, or have been unsure about whom you can really trust, we invite you to call Taylor Plumbing, and join our many customers who have been delighted to find a plumber they can always count on.

We look forward to the opportunity to earn your business.

Cross-Connection Control & Backflow Prevention

You take a sip of cool water and trust that it is safe. But without properly functioning controls, wastewater can flow backwards into your clean water supply. The result is water contamination and a significant health hazard.

Did you know that for public facilities and some larger residences, the EPA mandates that backflow prevention systems be in-place and tested annually? The benefits of clean water are obvious. It can be challenging, however, to understand the many details and regulations surrounding backflow prevention systems.

Taylor Plumbing is one of the leading certified cross-connection control and backflow prevention contractors in Chicagoland.

With more than 5000 devices tested annually and hundreds more installed or repaired, you can count on Taylor Plumbing to deliver the in-depth expertise you need in this critical area.

Services:

Maintenance and Repair
